Diving Bali

The greatest features of Bali diving are the incredibly rich and varied dive sites. Deep drop-offs and steep banks, coral ridges and bommies, one of the most famous wrecks in the world, volcanic outcrops and sea grass beds are all part of the underwater tapestry. With its colourful and diverse marine life, there's enough here to keep you coming back for more.

To the east of the island lies the Lombok Strait, the first deep water trench directly to the east of the Asian continental shelf. Through this channel flows the greatest volume of tidal water on earth. This Pacific Ocean can create some powerful currents and rollercoaster rides that characterize some of the dive sites. It also means regular visits from large and unusual pelagic fish like the incredible mola mola, or sunfish. The strong currents can also clean the water and create fantastic visibility.

All of this combined with the friendliness of the Balinese people, glorious weather and volcanic beaches makes Bali an increasingly sought after destination by divers from across the world.

Highlights

If you wanted to record all the animals you can see when scuba diving in Bali, you'd need to bring along a mini-library of marine guide books. From hairy frogfish, cockatoo leaf fish and pygmy seahorses in Secret Bay and Menjangan on the north west tip of the island, to bumphead parrotfish and reef sharks in the north and east at Tulamben and Candi Dasa, to the sunfish and trevallies of nearby Nusa Penida and Lembongan islands, the marine sights of Bali are truly fascinating.

There is something for everyone; allow yourself to be surprised for you really never know just what you might see in this ever-changing underwater jewel. Experienced divers will enjoy the thrill of the currents around Nusa Penida, beginners will love the simplicity of the sites in Amed and Padang Bai and photographers will flock to the muck diving sites of Tulamben. But for us there are 2 clear highlights:

USS Liberty - a wreck dive of international renown. Just off the stony shore of Tulamben lies the most beautifully colourful wreck you can imagine. Easy access, mild conditions and shallow water mean that everyone can enjoy the splendour of this wreck and interact with the myriad species that call it home.

Lembongan Island - Away from the crowds of mainland Bali just off Nusa Lembongan lies Blue Corner where there are common sightings of one of the most incredible and odd-looking creatures of the sea the Mola Mola, or sunfish. Spot one here and you can tick off a major diving 'must see'. Emerge slightly shaken by the changeable currents but with a smile that won't leave your face for the rest of the day.
